"The Inherent Worth and Dignity of Every Perspective"
Annual Youth-Led Service

In turning on the television, radio and social media, we encounter that everyone has an opinion. Yet there is not as much awareness about the perspectives from which these opinions emerge. What would it look like to create space in which everyone's perspective could co-exist while engaging in practices that allow us to truly hear and see where another is coming from. Our youth group will share how they found that by taking just a few seconds to really look through another set of eyes, we can better coexist as a community.

TOUCHSTONES

The Rev. Natalie Maxwell Fenimore
Minister of Lifespan Religious Education

The recent mass shooting at the Marjory Stoneman Douglas High School in Parkland, Florida has energized young people to take the lead in our national conversation about gun violence.

This echoes the youthful leadership of the Movement for Black Lives and the #MeToo Movement. These young voices are powerful and courageous.

Our Unitarian Universalist faith tradition has long prided itself on supporting children and youth by giving them a listening ear, and respecting their abilities to speak their truths, and offer their voices to our democratic institutions – including having a role in setting the direction of our denominational and congregational mission and vision.

While members of our society have varying opinions on gun control and gun safety, we are faced, in this moment, with an opportunity to listen to the voices of the youth who are living with the reality of growing up fearful of school mass shootings. We need to be attentive to those who are suffering from the fear and anxiety of growing up with gun violence in cities and suburbs. We need to be open to honest and difficult conversations. It is a time to listen to the children and incorporate their cries into our national debate.

There are no easy answers to the problem of gun violence. I don't know what laws can be passed. I don't pretend to have the answers. But I do believe that we cannot dismiss the need for a national conversation. This conversation goes beyond any particular political position and speaks to our concern for one another as part of the Beloved Community. I know that there are so many issues that concern us but we cannot afford to look away and have school shootings become the "new normal."

In the words of Marjory Stoneman Douglas High School student, Emma Gonzalez:" …we are speaking up for those who don't have anyone listening to them, for those who can't talk about it just yet, for those who will never speak again. We are grieving, we are furious, and we are using our words fiercely and desperately because that's the only thing standing between us and this happening again."

Unfortunately, the young people in Florida are now experiencing the violence that has long been part of the lives of poor and underserved communities in our nation. We send our hopes and prayers – and dedicate our actions - to overcoming this violence. May we listen to the brave young people who seek to build a better world.

Veatch Grantee Helps Defeat Anti-Immigrant Legislation

This year, Veatch Weekend featured several grantees representing immigrant communities. One of the speakers was Christine Neumann-Ortiz, Executive Director of Voces De La Frontera (Voces). With the attacks on immigrant communities continuing to escalate across the nation and continuing gridlock at the federal level, state-based groups such as Voces are rising to the moment. Recently, Voces helped defeat a wave of anti-immigrant legislation in Wisconsin. Bills AB190 and 287 were voted out of assembly and senate committees, but never made it to the floor for final votes because of grassroots organizing done by Voces.

These pieces of proposed legislation would have, amongst other things, forced local law enforcement to cooperate with ICE agents and detained community members without due process, as well as penalized municipalities that enacted ordinances to give aid to undocumented immigrants. Critics also site that the legislation threatened Wisconsin's economy by forcing immigrant workers, homeowners, and businesspeople to leave Wisconsin. Critics say that Wisconsin's signature dairy industry, where 80% of the workers are immigrants, would have been particularly devastated. In Wisconsin, one in ten jobs depend on dairy, and small- and medium-sized dairy farms would be hit the hardest.

Also at the center of this issue was former Milwaukee County Sheriff David Clarke, who publicly campaigned for local law enforcement collaboration with federal immigration authorities. Clarke made national headlines in 2016 for his speech at the Republican National Convention, as well as for controversies regarding deaths of individuals detained under his management, including a newborn baby. Clarke's involvement in the issue raised concerns from civil rights advocates, who said they were worried about racial profiling in this political climate. Clarke has since resigned.

A Day Without Immigrants General Strike

To oppose the wave of anti-immigrant legislation, Voces brought together, a large coalition of immigrant families and allies, African Americans, people of faith, and dairy farmers. This coalition threatened a statewide general strike if the legislation were to be approved. Voces created flyers, letters inviting businesses to close, permission slips for parents to withdraw children from school, and coordinated transportation, and brought together hundreds of community members to make this possible. Voces also helped organize a march of over 50,000 people, drawing massive media attention across the state and in international news outlets. Voces also worked to get commitments from local elected officials to resist the implementation of the legislation. Although Voces was successful in defeating this round of legislation, they expect attacks on immigrant communities to continue.

SOCIAL JUSTICE COORDINATOR

Claire Deroche

Following the Lead of the Youth

Usually I try to avoid writing about the same issue in quick succession. However, the enormity of the response to the tragedy at Marjory Stoneman Douglas High School in Parkland, Florida on February 14, 2018 requires more attention.

Once the student survivors announced their plans for the "March for Our Lives" in Washington, DC, on Saturday, March 24, communities here and abroad started planning similar events in their areas. As I write this article, the total number of these activities is up to 75, with the latest addition being Munich, Germany.

The investor sector is another group responding. On February 22, Blackrock, the world's largest money manager announced that it would meet with weapons manufacturers and distributors in which it invests to "understand" their response to the tragedy in Parkland, FL. This announcement was followed a few days later by a similar statement from State Street Corp, a 225-year-old institution responsible for more than 10 percent of the world's assets. They will engage with weapons-makers and sellers to learn more about how they will ensure the safe use of their products. These actions on the part of such powerful investment firms are highly unusual and bear monitoring.

At the recent winter meeting of the Interfaith Centre for Corporate Responsibility (ICCR), members of the Gun Safety Investor Group gathered to continue their work with gun manufacturers, Sturm Ruger and American Outdoor Brands, formerly Smith & Wesson Holding Corporation, and retailer, Dick's Sporting Goods. Members of the group have filed shareholder resolutions asking that the manufacturers report on the company's efforts related to producing guns with built-in safety measures. (Although UUCSR owns enough stock to co-file these resolutions, we had not owned it long enough when the resolutions were filed.)

Members also filed a resolution with Dick's Sporting Goods asking that they adhere to The Sandy Hook Principles. These are measures that companies can take that are aimed at curbing gun violence. When Dick's reported that they currently perform background checks and gun safety education at point of sale, do not sell firearm accessories that increase lethality and encourage gun safety, the filers withdrew the resolution. The CEO of Dick's Sporting Goods, Edward Stack, illustrated the company's commitment when not long after the Parkland tragedy, he announced that they will curtail the sale of firearms, including ending sales of assault-style rifles, and ban the sale of guns to people younger than 21.

At UUCSR, the Social Justice Committee is collecting signatures on letters to the leaders of the Senate Judiciary Committee, Sen. Chuck Grassley (R-IA) and Sen. Diane Feinstein (D-CA), asking that they prevent the Federally Mandated Concealed Carry Reciprocity legislation, that is now in their committee, from becoming law. (The House of Representatives has already passed their version of the bill.) This legislation would permit gun owners with concealed carry permits in their own states to come to New York and carry concealed weapons without a NYS issued permit. Since our NYS Senators oppose the legislation, we decided to move on to influencing the leaders of the Judiciary Committee. Please stop by the SJ table in the lobby after worship on Sunday to sign the letters.

Finally, for information about marches on Long Island, please see "March For Our Lives," below. Let's continue to follow the trail that the Parkland, FL youth are blazing for us!

Bookstore Survey Results

We thank all of you who answered the survey. Committee members were heartened to read your mostly positive comments. You've been there and enjoyed it and find it important to have a bookstore for a variety of reasons.

By and large, we are a reading congregation and what you'll find at the UUCSR bookstore reflects the interests expressed by the visitors. We buy from whichever vendor offers the lowest/best terms, including internet stores, and this is reflected in the price of all items in the Bookstore. There is no profit and no cost to the congregation..

Our bookstore is an attractive, lively part of our building, a place where people can not only buy books, meditation manuals, UU decorative items and jewelry, but also engage in conversation about our values and principles. If a modest amount were budgeted for the store, the range of books and other offerings could expand significantly. Several responses to the survey suggested an entrance to the store from the lobby rather than from the side of the hallway; this has been advocated for many years and should be seriously considered.

We are particularly happy that some of you are willing to help out in the store. We look forward to your ideas. If you cannot come to meetings, we would like to welcome you as a "volunteer." We hope everyone would participate one Sunday per month.

Finally, the Bookstore Committee's view is that it is important to preserve and support the bookstore, and the access it provides to writings that have been an eloquent hallmark of our movement since its beginnings. (Incidentally, Beacon Press and the UUA Bookstore include works not necessarily available in places like Barnes and Noble and Amazon.) Visitors and friends are always delighted to find the store, and once there, ask questions about the congregation and Unitarian Universalism; so we think it is useful to the expansion of our values, and is instrumental in attracting new members.

SOULFUL SMALL GROUP

Friday, March 16, 2018, 7:00 PM, Room 14

This discussion group is modeled after Soulful Sundown. For March, Kenny Rogers' "The Gambler" (www.j.mp/ssgrisk) provides a springboard for sharing our thoughts and stories as we explore the song's spiritual and personal relevance. Facilitators are Alice Giordano and Steve Marston. Inquire or register with Lea Titza at Ltitza@uucsr.org or 516.472.2975; she'll send you a format/agenda and covenant, so you'll know what to expect. We'll send you an email before each meeting that includes the song title, composer, lyrics, theme, web links, and some food for thought. We start promptly at 7:00 PM; the rear parking lot near the Chapel is closest to Room 14. Further details can be found on the www.UCSR.org calendar.

MEMBERSHIP MATTERS

Ben Bortin, Membership and Volunteer Coordinator

I'm constantly playing catch-up with introductions of our new members, and apologies to them and to the rest of you about that. I am nonetheless invariably delighted to welcome new people to our membership midst, and present them to you, if all too briefly. Credit goes to Carol McHugh, Chair of the Membership Committee, for the introductions of Cindy Osman and Jenny Roberts.

Cindy Osman spent much of her life in corporate moves to cities as diverse as Salt Lake City, Philadelphia, Bethesda, and Minneapolis. She has happily settled in Port Washington and is pleased to call UUCSR her spiritual home. Her background is Methodist, but like many UUCSR members, spent years unaffiliated. Cindy heard about us from Port Washington friends and neighbors.

Personally, her husband and she are going through hard times as they are experiencing the illness of her father-in-law. She appreciates the Sunday service and especially being able to light a candle for him.

As she is a busy pediatrician, her time is somewhat limited, but she hopes to be able to participate in other activities as time allows. We welcome Cindy, and wish her well as a new member!

Jenny Roberts became aware of the Unitarian Universalist movement based in Boston. Her daughter has been attending UUCSR's RE program, and she likes it very much. We are happy to introduce Jenny, who was raised Catholic, to the congregation.

Jenny is interested in crafts. She makes pillows, among other things. (She may find herself in a congregational quilting group!) A warm welcome to her, to her husband, Ralph Gasparello, who will be introduced in a later issue, and to their daughter.

Leona Handelman is a fourth-generation resident of New York City, now residing in Manhattan, and describes herself as of Judeo-Christian background.

One of her interests is bridge, and for some time, she has been part of the Bridge class and group which meet Wednesdays and Fridays at UUCSR. She also is interested in Mah Jongg, knitting, music, and mathematics. (She's taught junior high and high school math.)

Her reason for joining this congregation? In her own words, "I was looking for a meaningful relationship with others who are committed to making the world a better place."

Harriet and James McKenna are welcomed as the newest members of the congregation. Harriet has already graced our congregational program with her beautiful musicianship on the harp.

Membership in Unitarian Universalism, in the words of the late Jack Mendelsohn, is as much a becoming as an arriving. I hope the journeys of all of you above, in a community of fellow seekers, is as upliftingly transformative for you as it has been for me.
